LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
BUREAU OF EDUCATION,
Washington, D. C., July 7, 1893.

SIR: I submit herewith for printing a Circular of Information containing the most recent statistics regarding the public libraries in the United States containing 1,000 volumes and upward. These statistics have been collected under the supervision of Mr. Flint, the statistician of this Office, who has carefully digested the returns. In the introduction to the circular he has given a series of diagrams showing the comparative condition of older and newer States in regard to libraries, together with an exhibit of the growth in the six years since the last report on libraries was printed. A comparison of libraries by size, amount of library property, method of support, method of issuing books, classes of books in the collections, number of volumes issued to readers, ratio of number of books to the population, and other items, is given, illustrated with graphic views.

In the year 1876 Gen. Eaton, then Commissioner of Education, collected statistics giving information concerning 3,647 public libraries in the United States. This list included all public libraries containing 300 volumes and upward that could be heard from. Ten years later (1884-'85), undertaking to revise this list, he succeeded in obtaining returns from 5,338 libraries—thus increasing the former list by 1,691, or nearly 50 per cent.

The expression "public library" in this list included school, college, and college society libraries; medical, theological, law libraries; historical, scientific, and sanitary libraries, social libraries, society libraries, including those of the Young Men's Christian Associations, those of Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and learned societies; general libraries, including free libraries supported by taxation, subscription libraries, government libraries, and in brief all libraries for the use of the public at large or for institutions, societies, or special classes of people.

The aggregate of volumes of these 5,338 libraries was 20,622,076, giving an average of nearly 4,000 volumes to each.

Precëminent among States was the showing of Massachusetts, with its 569 libraries and 3,560,085 volumes. Next came New York, with 2,168,508 volumes in 780 libraries.

The list of libraries herewith presented includes only such as contain 1,000 volumes and over, and the aggregate of such is given as 3,804. Deducting from the list of 1885 all libraries of less than 1,000 volumes, the number reported was 2,987. It appears from this that the increase in six years is something over 27 per cent in number of libraries. The increase in number of books is 66 per cent, being 12,000,000. From this it appears that there has been an increase in number of volumes on an average of nearly 2,000 to each library. In recent years large benefactions have been made to found and support libraries. In sections where public libraries are authorized by law for each town many donations from private sources have been made to furnish elegant and convenient buildings to hold the books.

The past fifteen years form an era of unparalleled activity on the part of the professional librarians of the country. It is interesting to note that the American Library Association was formed at the time of the publication of the first report by this Bureau of the statistics of libraries in the United States. That report contained a notice of the first convention of librarians in 1853 and a call for the first meeting of the Library Association in Philadelphia in 1876. The activity of the Library Association there founded has been a wise one, because it has been a concerted activity. It has organized beneficent movements, in the way of classification and methods of keeping library records; in useful devices for shelving, for issuing, for taking inventories, for establishing branch libraries in convenient places, for making the library useful to special classes, for printed catalogues, card and other catalogues. Much has been done in the way of cataloguing the contents of serial publications and reports of institutions and systems. The library is the most powerful of all the tools of thought, and to the American Library Association is due the gratitude of scholars for numerous devices which tend to the perfection of this instrument.

All persons interested in the subject of education will note with satisfaction the progress of the library. Next after the school and the daily newspaper comes the library in educative power. These three institutions are the great secular means which our people have to prepare themselves for their singular destiny. The school, for the most part, finds its function in teaching how to read. The newspaper and library furnish what to read.

It is clear that one of the most important interests in education is to be found in connecting closely the common school with the public library. It is common to call a person educated who knows the rudimentary branches—reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, history, grammar, etc. By these he is enabled to help himself to the information and wisdom stored up in the library. He is prepared to begin the work of educating himself. To be educated in any true sense of the word he must use the library and master the experience of mankind. The school gives the preliminary preparation for education, and the library gives the means by which the individual completes and accomplishes his education.

I have often pointed out that the American school has some sort of justification for its much blamed adherence to the text-book method of instruction. The pedagogues of other nations, and especially those of Germany, condemn our system for its worst features—the slavish use of the book and the frequent acceptance by our teachers of parrot-like repetition of the text in the place of an intelligent understanding of what is set down in the book and a critical investigation of the subject at first hand.

This is doubtless the weakest side of our school education. But it has, I repeat, this great good thing to counterbalance in some measure its evil. It has by a happy sort of instinct been guided towards a newer and higher method than that which our critics would put in its place. For they would substitute the oral method, and thereby make the schoolboy still more dependent on the living voice of his teacher for what he gets from mankind. The boy who is taught to use the printed page properly—how to weigh its statements and critically test them by such experiments as he can make, or compare them with other authorities by aid of the library—is a far more shifty boy than the one who has merely received his instruction orally. For it is not usual to receive from the living teacher his words in a critical and questioning attitude. Few teachers are able to encourage in their pupils the spirit of inquiry and independent verification to the extent of letting their own teachings submit to this treatment. There is something too personal in this exclusively oral method, this lecturing method, and it has its weak sides, as weak as those it condemns in the American school. For if there are pupils in every school and whole classes in exceptional schools that memorize the words of the book without comprehending their meaning, on the other hand there are those taught by the oral method who write out the words of their teacher and piously repeat what has been dictated to them. Moreover, not having before them the full and well-balanced discussion of the text-book, they get a one-sided, distorted view of the subject-matter. They can not, if they come to a point where they lose the thread of the discourse, go back and pick it up—they are dragged from point to point by the necessity of keeping up with the lecturer and lose entirely what they fail to grasp on first hearing. Such pupils, too, grow up with a tendency to require oral explanation made to them and a reluctance to go to the scientific treatise and dig out the whole subject for themselves.

What there is good in our American system points toward this preparation of the pupil for independent study of the book by himself. It points toward acquiring the ability of self-education by means of the library.

Instead of parrot-like repetition of what is in the text-book, our model school requires the pupil to restate in his own language the ideas of the book. But even this is a small part of what it requires, for it insists on a critical examination of the statements of the book in view of all the facts that can be otherwise ascertained and adduced by pupils and teacher, and also in view of the same author's statements elsewhere in the book.

The text-book is impersonal and does not impose on the individuality of the pupil the weight of authority that the living teacher carries with him in spite of all efforts that he may make to encourage independent judgment.

This is the good element in our American method, I repeat again, and when our country was everywhere sparsely settled (as it is even now except in a few sections) it was obvious that the individual must depend on the printed page of the book for what he should get from his fellowmen in the way of scientific observation of the world and man, and in the way of thought and reflection on the data recorded. The library is the storehouse of the aggregate observations of all mankind on the phenomena of the universe—not of what the senses of one single man have perceived, but of what the senses of all men have perceived; more than this, the library holds the record of the reflections of all human brains on these data of observation. And even more than this, the library holds in its works of literary art the portrayal of human nature as it has been lived and is lived by all stages of civilization and by the various races that people the earth. It holds this vast mass of observation, reflection, and insight, not in its crude form, but winnowed out—each grain that the library preserves was taken from a mountain of chaff. Doubtless it holds still on its shelves much chaff, but compared with the crude material of human experience from which it has been saved it is all precious grain.

In the American school the pupil is set to work learning how to master what is found on the printed page. This is the central object toward which our national methods have been unconsciously guided. In order that the pupil shall acquire the ability to use the library he must first learn to read. This involves learning the alphabet and the spelling book and much more. For the schoolboy must in school set about acquiring a new and higher vocabulary of words. He brings with him from home a colloquial vocabulary meager in its number of words and in their quality to express subtle distinctions or precise definitions, or elevated sentiment, or profound thoughts. In school he commences by learning first how to recognize the words of his colloquial vocabulary in a printed and written form. Before this epoch he has only known them by ear—they were sounds to him—now they must be represented to his eye by conventional characters.

After he has learned to recognize the words in printed form that were already familiar to him by ear, he is set to mastering a series of text-books which use strange technical words new to his ear, new to his eye, and likewise expressing ideas new to his mind. He learns a special vocabulary of these for arithmetic and other branches of mathematics; another for geography and his relations to the earth and its inhabitants; another for history and his relations to his fellow-citizens, his nation, his race, and the stream of generations down which he and his contemporaries have descended. He learns to recognize in the institutions of society the organized forms of his higher selves that have been unfolded and realized for him in those institutions. A special vocabulary has to be learned for these things and also for the study of language in grammar and philology. Language is the first revelation of human nature, its structure being an embodiment of the logical laws of the mind.

Every special science has its own special vocabulary, larger or smaller, of new words. The schoolboy must learn their external forms and their internal meanings.

But there is a more important and more practical language of reading than science, and this is literature or what has been called the "literary bibles" of the nations. The content of literature is the revelation of human life in its aspirations and actions, in its victories and its defeats. Homer, Dante, Shakespeare, and Goethe are the great leaders of the sacred army of men who have made and are making this revelation of human life. Every literary writer has a style of his own, which his readers must learn to master. The school teaches a hundred or more of these styles by choice extracts in the higher school readers, the selections being intense and impassioned pieces of prose and poetry calculated to arouse the imagination, refine the taste, and kindle the aspiration of the youth, as well as give him some acquaintance with the special vocabulary and peculiarities of style that he uses. For this purpose a book of selections like the typical school reader is far better than any other device that can be thought of. But it should be supplemented by other reading which deals with entire works of literary art.

I come now to mention a practical device by which the common school can especially fit its pupils for the use of the library, and a device, too, that any library can aid indefinitely in carrying out in its neighborhood.

The regular reading lesson in the school does not and can not occupy much time on the daily programme. Not many pages can be read over, because the pupil must be questioned and cross-questioned on the meaning and use of the words and on the power and effect of the style used and on the near and remote thoughts suggested. No pupil after a good drill on a literary piece ever reads a similar piece in book or periodical without looking consciously or unconsciously for some of the points that have been brought out in his lesson. He is now of a capacity to get more from his reading than was before possible to him. His vocabulary has been increased, but not so much as his power to increase it. If he would only take home with him a book from the library and read a whole story written by the author whose literary gem he has carefully studied in school, he would be able to increase his higher vocabulary far more rapidly than he will do otherwise. He will, moreover, fix and assimilate this higher vocabulary in such a way that it will always remain his own. Still better, he will become a home reader and a user of the library for life.

Let us suppose that he has read for the day with his class at school a charming selection from Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake." The teacher has ten copies of the "Lady of the Lake," and lets the ten best pupils in the class take home the poem for the week and read it through—a week is sufficient for this. The entire poem is the topic for an hour's conversation on a Friday afternoon. The next week the second ten pupils take this poem to their homes; a third week another set of ten, and so on until all the class have read this poem, which will make a memorable epoch in their lives. A selection from Swift's Gulliver's voyages to Lilliput or to Brobdignag would perhaps be found in the child's fourth or fifth reading book, and the whole story could be read at home by the children if ten or twenty copies of the book belonged to the school library.

The library is the most important link in that great movement that has recently spread hither from England. I refer to university and school extension. Few children complete the course even of the primary school. Only one in four who enter the high school completes it. The great desideratum, therefore, is some method by which the school influence can follow the pupils who leave school before completing the work, or who, graduating from it, ought to continue their work. Having learned how to read, they should now use their acquired power to some purpose, to master the fields of human learning.

I have spoken of the eminent value of works of literary art for giving the pupil a higher vocabulary of thought and feeling, and for making him acquainted with himself. By this knowledge one does not, of course, mean a knowledge of his own petty idiosyncrasies and peculiarities, but a knowledge of human nature at large; a knowledge of what is substantial in character and profound in human thought. Literature is the best, but it should not by any means be the exclusive course of reading.

For the supplementary reading to be done at home there should be intermingled books of history, books of travel, popular expositions of the different sciences. Some people would have these books and no others, and would call them alone the "solid" books, while the pure literary works they would denominate "trash." In my opinion they could not commit a more serious error. I have known many parents possessed of the science craze who tried to educate their children on science to the exclusion of literature, but their results were pitiful. Their children were deprived of an insight into human life—into the springs of human character and the motives that prevail among the people with whom they must live. This knowledge of human life obtained through the writings of genius should occupy the first place on the list of studies essential to direct self-preservation, using the expression of Mr. Herbert Spencer and pointing out, by the way, that his own scheme of studies is very far from corresponding to the requirements of the principles that he lays down.

On the other hand, one must be careful not to commit the opposite mistakes of excluding science and history or of slighting these studies for literature. They are all necessary.

It must not be forgotten that this work in supplementary reading is a work of self-help on the part of the pupil and is of very great value from this point of view. It assists very much to neutralize the effects of bad school methods where they happen to exist. Another great point is that the books are taken home by the pupils into families who have no accumulation of books, or, at best, only of such books as lack popular interest. These books taken home are picked up by the parents and older brothers and sisters and read by them. This makes the supplementary reading system an educator of the people as people—an extension of the school that is of vital importance.

The library should get hold of this phase of school extension and so manage it that all who begin it are drawn into the use of the library.

Fiction is the bait by which we create a love for reading, and it should lead out to other reading, especially in the line of science, and history, and philosophy. But I have tried to show that it is not a hopeless case if it does not lead into these fields to any great extent, for the reading of fiction has the substantial benefits which I have stated. But there is fiction and fiction. Fiction written by an author who has deeply lived, deeply felt, and deeply thought is of value to all men whether simple or learned.

But the weak and shallow writer who has not sounded the depths of life, not seen its ethical substructure, such a writer is immoral and misleading in his views of life even though he supposes himself to be very religious, and be, in fact, engaged in writing Sunday-school books.

In another circular of information published by this Bureau is given a list of the 5,000 books to be purchased as the most useful foundation for a new library. These books are classified alphabetically by authors and titles, by two separate schemes of classification. Another circular, "Cutter's Rules," of which two editions have already been printed and circulated, relates to the minute details of the professional librarian's work. It is a circular prepared by Mr. Cutter, of the Boston Athenæum, and has been widely called for and used.

I can not forbear calling attention again and again to the cosmopolitan significance of the three educational instrumentalities of our time. The school teaches how to read—how to use the printed page to get out of it all that it contains. The library furnishes the what to read; it opens the storehouse of all human learning. These two are complementary functions in the great work of education. But the third great educational appliance of our time is the periodical, and especially the daily newspaper. In fact, we are in our time acquiring a sort of new consciousness by aid of this instrument, for it is a spiritual process of manufacturing public opinion out of private observation and reflection. Every morning it is customary for the dweller in the city to take a survey of the entire life of the globe—a brief glance at the nations most remote, a fuller view of those more nearly related to him, and a complete survey of what is in his neighborhood. The correlation of the near and the remote, the custom of carrying in his mind the world affairs, develops a sort of epic consciousness vastly more educative than the former village gossip that prevailed in the tavern or in the shop. It elevates the individual into a higher plane of thinking, substituting the universal for the particular. It would seem as though the world as a whole is bound to grow into this newspaper civilization and that it is a necessity of all newspaper civilizations to be democratic in their form of government. But it is evident that this newspaper species of education needs the coöperation and perfecting influence of the library. The school is essential to the newspaper reader to give him that knowledge of a printed vocabulary of words and that smattering of geography, history, grammar and science required to understand and follow the newspaper articles.

The apparatus for higher investigation is to be found in the bibliographic lists in various fields of human learning. The librarians have constructed indexes to periodical literature, subclassified under such heads as the several special sciences, the special departments of history, localities, biographies, etc. A "Critical History of America" in eight volumes has been prepared by a distinguished librarian. Here is a field in which the librarian prepares the mass of human learning for the use of his less persistent or less plodding fellow-citizen, the newspaper reader, or at best the popular book reader. The learned librarian leads him to original sources and offers these sources in a compendious form for his use. Indexes and collections of original sources do wonders to deepen and make accurate the scholarship of a nation. Those familiar with German scholarship need only to be reminded of the vast number of works of this order which facilitate the complete survey of special subjects.

The school and the newspaper and the library, working together, may be each helped by the other, and all may be united into one very potent instrumentality of education for the universal elevation of the people that is on its procession in different parts of the world. The community, locally self-governed, is likely to be interested with a truly cosmopolitan spirit (and shall I not say with a missionary spirit?) in all other peoples around the globe. In this line we see infinite possibilities of growth in perfection, infinite possibilities of that education which adds to the individual life vicariously the life and life's experience of all his fellow-men.

This aspect of the question suggests a still broader one: The school and the newspaper and the library, working together in mutual helpfulness, form the very potent means of education which is necessary for the universal elevation of the people that characterizes the history of the world in the present century. Intercommunication by steamships, railroads, telegraphs, telephones, and an omnipresent postal system, generates a cosmopolitan spirit, or what is better called the missionary spirit. Feelings of hostility toward foreign nations or distant sections of one's own country give place to feelings of humane personal interest. As each section becomes locally self-governed it uses its directive power more and more in view of the net result of the experience of the entire human race. This threefold means of education increases, with greater and greater rapidity, the diffusion of local self-government. There is a brain for each pair of hands. Each brain avails itself by means of the printed page of the labors of all other brains. Life becomes vicarious. Each human being lives his life not only for himself but as a lesson for all his fellowmen. Others may use his successful experiments and avoid repeating his unsuccessful ones.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. T. HARRIS,
Commissioner.

Secretary of the Interior.

STATISTICS OF LIBRARIES IN THE UNITED STATES.

From the establishment of a Department of Education in 1867, and its conversion into a Bureau in 1869, the importance of libraries as a factor in educational work has been recognized in its reports and other publications. The extended work of the Bureau on this subject began in 1870, when the collection of statistics and the preparation of the matter for a special report on public libraries was undertaken. The report was issued in 1876. This was before any regular library journal was printed in this country, and what has been done during the period since 1870 by the Bureau contains no small portion of the history of the progress of libraries in this country. This special report, after giving a short history of the first convention of librarians in 1853, contains the notice of a call for the first meeting of the American Library Association in Philadelphia in 1876, thus showing at the very beginning its interest in library management as a very prominent part in the educational interests of the country.

The Bureau of Education at that time, in considering the importance of libraries in connection with education, undertook four distinct things: (1) To trace the history of public libraries in the United States; (2) to show their present condition and extent; (3) to discuss the various questions of library economy and management; and (4) to present complete statistical information of public libraries of all classes. At that early date these four points mentioned covered a large field in the matter of library economy and management, and the publications of the Bureau since that date have given no small portion of their pages to these questions. As to the early statistics of libraries in this country but little can be found. Prof. Jewett, in his "Notices of Public Libraries," published by the Smithsonian Institution in 1850, gave a summary of public libraries, amounting to 694 and containing at that time 2,201,632 volumes. In the census of 1850 an attempt was made to give the number of libraries and the number of volumes they contained, exclusive of school and Sunday school libraries. This number was 1,560; the number of volumes, 2,447,086. In 1856 Mr. ——— Edwards in his summary of libraries gave a much smaller number of libraries, being only 341, but the number of volumes was nearly the same, being 2,371,887, and was also based upon the census of 1850. Mr. William J. Rhees, in his "Manual of Public Libraries," which was printed in 1859, gave a list of 2,902 libraries, but of all this number only 1,312 had any report whatever of the number of volumes they contained.

From these meager statistics it is seen that the reports do not vary very much, giving about the same number of libraries and number of volumes in them, taking account of the changes that would occur from the different classifications as to what was excepted or omitted as a library. The annual reports of the Bureau from 1870 to 1874 contained limited statistics of only a few hundred libraries, and little more is shown than the fact that there were about 2,000 public libraries of all kinds in the United States. About five years of labor was expended in collecting material for the special report of the Bureau upon public libraries, which was printed in 1876, and this gave a list of 3,649 libraries of over 300 volumes, and the total number of volumes was 12,276,964, this being about the first fairly complete collection of library statistics. In the report of the Bureau for 1884-85, after considerable correspondence and using the former work as a basis, another list of public libraries was published, amounting to 5,388 libraries of over 300 volumes, an increase of 1,869 libraries in ten years, or almost 54 per cent. The number of volumes contained in these libraries at that time was 20,622,076, or an increase of about 66 per cent, and showing that the percentage of increase in the number of volumes was even greater than that of the number of libraries. An estimate of the proportion of smaller libraries under 500 volumes in that list indicates that these smaller libraries included only about 20 per cent of the books, so that this list could be said to fairly show the extent of the libraries at that time.

In the report for 1886-87, detailed statistics of the various classes of libraries were given, except those of colleges and schools, which were included in the statistics of those institutions. From the uncertainty of the data and the imperfect records given of the very small libraries, it was deemed best to restrict the statistics to collections of books that might be fairly called representative, and as those having less than 1,000 volumes made but a proportionally small percentage of the whole number of books the basis of 1,000 volumes or over was taken. This list included the statistics only of libraries of this size and amounted to 1,777 libraries, containing 14,012,370 volumes, and were arranged in separate lists by classes as far as it could be done. The libraries thus reported, which were wholly or partly supported by public moneys, numbered 670 and contained 6,963,850 volumes. Those otherwise maintained numbered 1,109, containing 7,048,520 volumes. Nearly every one of the libraries maintained wholly or partly by public moneys was free for public use. Of the libraries otherwise maintained, 868 required membership fees, annual subscriptions, or payment for books taken out, and these contained 5,532,750 volumes. From this it would seem to follow that the other 911 libraries, containing 8,896,620 volumes, were probably free libraries. The number of libraries and of volumes in each of the seven special classes in the report made in 1887 was as follows: Free public lending libraries, 434; volumes, 3,721,191; free public reference libraries, 153; volumes, 3,075,099; free public school libraries, 93; volumes, 177,560; free corporate lending libraries, 241; volumes, 1,727,870; libraries of clubs, associations, etc., 341; volumes, 2,460,334; subscription corporate libraries, 452; volumes, 2,644,929; and circulating libraries proper, 751; volumes, 215,487.

LIBRARIES IN 1891.

The statistics given in the following pages are for the year 1891, and include only libraries of 1,000 volumes and over, thus differing from the complete report of 1885:

By examining Table I, it will be seen that there were, in 1891, 3,804 libraries. Of these, 3 contain over 500,000 volumes; 1 between 300,000 and 500,000; 26 between 100,000 and 300,000; 68 between 50,000 and 100,000; 128 between 25,000 and 50,000; 383 between 10,000 and 25,000; 565 between 5,000 and 10,000; and 2,360 between 1,000 and 5,000. In the geographical distribution of these libraries, the North Atlantic Division has 2 of the first class, or 67 per cent; 15 of the third class, or 58 per cent; 36 of the fourth class, or 53 per cent; 75 of the fifth class, or 59 per cent; 182 of the sixth class, or 47.5 per cent; 295 of the seventh class, or 52 per cent; and 1,308 of the eighth class, or 50 per cent. The South Atlantic Division has 1, or 33.33 per cent, of the first class; 6, or 23 per cent, of the third class; 9, or 13 per cent, of the fourth class; 15, or 11.7 per cent, of the fifth class; 34, or 9 per cent, of the sixth class; 59, or 10.5 per cent, of the seventh class; and 214, or 8 per cent, of the eighth class. The South Central Division has 4, or 6 per cent, of the fourth class; 3, or 2.8 per cent, of the fifth class; 27, or 7 per cent, of the sixth class; 36, or 6.4 per cent, of the seventh class; and 186, or 7 per cent, of the eighth class. The North Central Division has the only one of the second class; 4, or 15.4 per cent, of the third class; 13, or 19 per cent, of the fourth class; 30, or 23 per cent, of the fifth class; 119, or 31 per cent, of the sixth class; 143, or 25 per cent, of the seventh class; and 789, or 30 per cent, of the eighth class. The Western Division has 1, or 4 per cent, of the third class; 6, or 9 per cent, of the fourth class; 5, or 4 per cent, of the fifth class; 21, or 55 per cent, of the sixth class; 32, or 5.7 per cent, of the seventh class; and 133, or 5 per cent, of the eighth class. A study of this table by States gives very interesting details of the location of the larger libraries, as well as the larger number of libraries in those portions of the country where the system of free public libraries has been longest in existence. Of all these classes, the State of New York has 511 libraries and Massachusetts 508, decreasing down to 3, which is the lowest number, as will be found in Table IV, on pp. 9-10.

In Tables II and III an attempt has been made to summarize the statistics of the following pages as regards ownership, support, whether circulating or reference, free or subscription, and as to the special class or character of the library. It will be seen from the tables that very many of the libraries do not report all these items, hence the numbers are incomplete. Of the whole number of libraries, 1,042 own buildings and 436 rent, 2,325 not reporting. Of the several forms of support, those by subscription are 1,501; by taxation, 879; by corporation and taxation, 26; by fees, 24; and a small number by rents, subscription, endowment, private and other forms of support, while those not reporting under this head are 1,307. As to whether circulating or reference, 133 are reported as circulating only, 406 as reference, and 1,838 as both circulating and reference; not reporting, 1,456. As to free or subscription, 2,156 are reported as free, 912 as subscription, 830 as free or subscription, and 651 not reporting. As to the class or character of the libraries, 1,196 are general, 911 school, 523 college, 106 belong to college societies, 117 law, 99 theological, 59 medical, 39 Government, 113 asylum or reformatory, 20 State, 75 Young Men's Christian Association, 215 social, 104 scientific, 53 historical, 18 garrison or post, 4 sanitary and scientific, 12 Odd Fellows, 9 Masonic, 11 mercantile, 2 special, 1 military, 1 art, 47 society, 4 historical and scientific, 1 historical and theological, and 63 not reporting.

Table IV gives a summary of statistics of libraries by States and divisions, as to the size of libraries, including unbound books and pamphlets, and the average size of libraries; population according to the census of 1890; average of population to a library, and the average number of books to every 100 of the population in each State and division. From this table it will be seen that the 3,804 libraries contained at the close of the year 1891 26,896,537 bound volumes and 4,340,817 pamphlets, or a total of 31,167,354. The average size of libraries was 8,194 volumes; the average population to a library was 16,462, and the average number of books to every 100 of the population was 50.

As to the average size of libraries in the different divisions, the North Atlantic Division has an average number of 8,640 volumes to a library; the South Atlantic, 12,420; the South Central, 5,257; the North Central, 6,688; and the Western, 8,046. As to the average population to a library, the North Atlantic Division has 9,906; the South Atlantic, 26,206; the South Central, 42,863; the North Central, 20,348, and the Western, 15,290. Of the average number of books to every 100 of the population, the North Atlantic division has 95, or nearly twice the average of the whole country; the South Atlantic, 48; the South Central, 12; the North Central, 33, and the Western, 53. The largest proportion of books to the population is in the District of Columbia, which has 924 books to every 100, and the next is the State of Massachusetts, having 257 to every 100.

The distribution of these libraries and the number of volumes they contain vary considerably in the several divisions. In order to show this more definitely, Diagram 1 has been prepared.

DIAGRAM 1.—Public libraries of over 1,000 volumes, 1891.

In this it will be seen that the North Atlantic Division contains 1,913 libraries, or 50.3 per cent of the whole number; the South Atlantic, 339, or 8.88 per cent; the South Central, 256, or 6.73 per cent; the North Central, 1,098, or 28.87 per cent, and the Western, 198, or 5.22 per cent. Of the distribution of volumes in the libraries, the North Atlantic Division has 16,605,286, or 53.34 per cent; the South Atlantic, 4,276,894, or 13.71 per cent; the South Central, 1,345,708, or 4.03 per cent; the North Central, 7,320,045, or 23.32 per cent, and the Western, 1,593,974, or 5.34 per cent.

INCREASE IN NUMBER AND SIZE OF LIBRARIES FROM 1885 TO 1891.

In order to give a proper estimate of the increase in the number of libraries and the number of volumes from 1885 to 1891, Table V has been prepared from the report of 1885.

* Estimated.

This table has been made by estimates and elimination to agree in form as far as possible with Table IV of the statistics for 1891, so as to make the comparison as to the average size of libraries, average population to a library, and average number of books for the six years between 1885 and 1891. The library journal for 1885 contained a table giving the number of books to each person, according to the report of libraries of 300 volumes or over for 1885, published by the Bureau; but that table was based upon the population of 1880, which was five years earlier than the report from the libraries, and hence was not an exact comparison as to population and libraries, etc. Table V has been corrected as to population by taking either the State census of 1885 or estimates for that year. The number of libraries for 1885 has been made upon the basis of those containing 1,000 volumes by subtracting all those under 1,000 volumes from the list. The number of volumes also includes only those of libraries containing 1,000 volumes, which makes it correspond to the table of 1891. Thus it will be seen that Tables IV and V are made upon the same basis as far as possible. By comparing these two tables it will be seen that the increase in the number of libraries has been quite a large percentage in the six years mentioned, as well as the increase in the number of volumes in the libraries. An examination of the figures for the different States will show the exact increase for each one, and makes a very interesting study. In order to show more clearly to the eye this increase, in both libraries and number of volumes in the whole United States and in the different divisions, Diagram 2 has been prepared.

DIAGRAM 2.—Public libraries of over 1,000 volumes.—Growth from 1885 to 1891.

DIAGRAM 2.—Public libraries of over 1,000 volumes.—Growth from 1885 to 1891—Cont'd.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF VOLUMES.

	1885.	1891.	Increase.	Volumes in 1885.	Increase to 1891.
United States.....	19,060,074	31,171,354	12,111,280		66.3 %
North Atlantic Division	10,388,224	16,605,286	6,217,062		59.9 %
South Atlantic Division	2,796,068	4,276,894	1,480,826		53.3 %
South Central Division	844,244	1,345,708	501,464		59.4 %
North Central Division	4,081,306	7,350,425	3,269,119		80.1 %
Western Division	950,232	1,593,044	642,800		67.5 %

From this it will be seen that the increase in the United States in the number of libraries was from 2,987 to 3,804, an increase of 817, or 27.35 per cent; in the North Atlantic, from 1,543 to 1,913, an increase of 370, or 24 per cent; in the South Atlantic, from 289 to 338, an increase of 49, or 17 per cent; in the South Central, from 201 to 256, an increase of 55, or 27.5 per cent; in the North Central, from 813 to 1,099, an increase of 286, or 35.18 per cent; and in the Western, from 141 to 198, an increase of 57, or 40.43 per cent. These figures show that, comparatively, the largest increase in the number of libraries was in the Western Division, and of the number of volumes the greatest increase was in the North Central Division. The percentage of increase in the whole country was 66.3 for six years, or an average of over 11 per cent each year, which at this rate would double the number of volumes and libraries every nine years.

From the foregoing tables, Diagram 3, p. 15, has been prepared to show the increase in the average size of the libraries in the country and in the several divisions. This shows that in the United States in 1885 the average size of the libraries of over 1,000 volumes was 6,381 volumes, and in 1891, 8,194, an average increase of 1,813 volumes to each library, or 28.4 per cent. In the North Atlantic Division the growth was from 6,084 to 8,680 volumes, an increase of 2,586, or 42.7 per cent; in the South Atlantic, from 9,675 to 12,670 volumes, an increase of 2,995, or 30.3 per cent; in the South Central, from 4,200 to 5,257 volumes, an increase of 1,057, or 25 per cent; in the North Central, from 5,020 to 6,668 volumes, an increase of 1,648, or 33 per cent, and in the Western, from 6,737 to 8,046 volumes, an increase of 1,309, or 19.5 per cent. The libraries of the largest average size are found in the South Atlantic Division; but this is explained by the fact of the large average size of libraries in the District of Columbia, notably increased by the rapid growth of the Library of Congress during the last few years. The diagram shows that not only in the country as a whole, but in each geographical division there has been an increase in the average size of libraries,

To show the growth of libraries another diagram, No. 4, p. 16, gives the average population to a library in 1885 and 1891.

DIAGRAM 3.—Public libraries of over 1,000 volumes.

INCREASE IN THE SIZE OF LIBRARIES, 1885-1893.

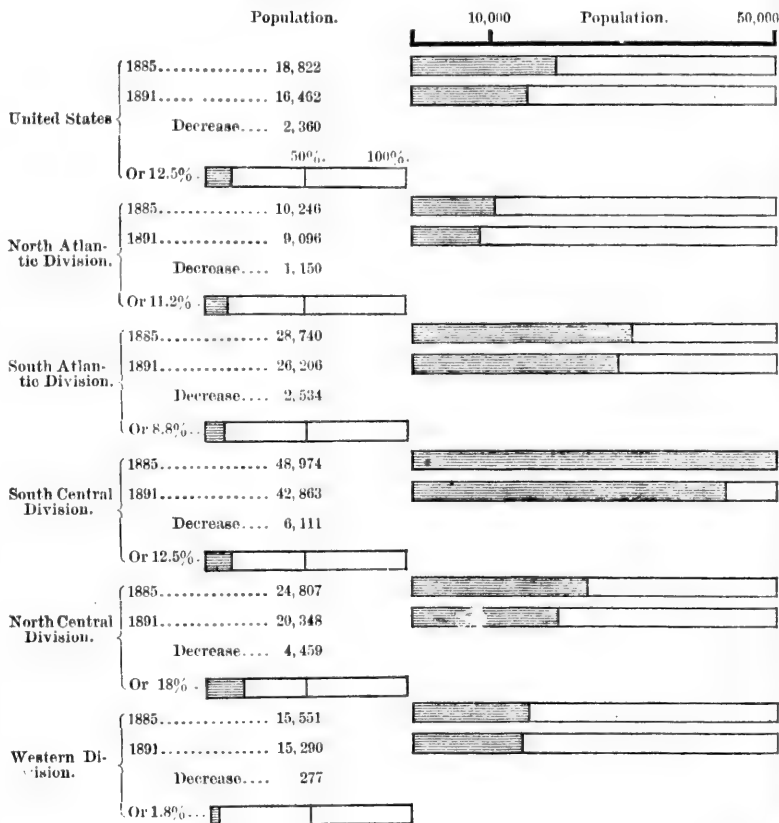

In the United States in 1885 there was one library to each 18,822 of the population, while in 1891 there was one to every 16,462, or a decrease of population to a library of 2,360, or 12.5 per cent; in the North Atlantic Division the decrease was from 10,246 to 9,096, 1,150, or 11.2 per cent; in the South Atlantic, from 28,740 to 26,206, 2,534, or 8.08 per cent; in the South Central, from 48,974 to 42,863, 6,111, or 12.5 per cent; in the North Central, from 24,807 to 20,348, 4,459, or 18 per cent; and in the Western, from 15,557 to 15,290, 277, or 1.8 per cent. The distribution of libraries in the North Atlantic Division shows the smallest average population to a library and the least change in the number, except the Western Division, where the increase of population from immigration has been greater than the increase in the number of libraries. But, generally, the establishment and growth in the size of libraries have been very large in nearly every section. In the general tables given, especially IV and V, one column shows the average number of books to each 100 of the population for every State and Territory. From these tables it will be seen that the increase in the number of books has been much greater than the increase in the population, according to the census, in nearly every State. In order to show to the eye this increase, Diagram 5 is given.

DIAGRAM 5.—Public libraries of over 1,000 volumes.

NUMBER OF BOOKS TO EVERY 100 OF POPULATION, AND INCREASE FROM 1885 TO 1893.

This shows that in 1885 there were in the United States in the libraries of the size mentioned 34 books to every 100 of the population, while in 1891 this number was 50, or an increase of 16 books, or 47 per cent. In the North Atlantic Division the increase was from 66 to 95, an increase of 29 books, or 34 per cent; in the South Atlantic, from 34 to 48, an increase of 14, or 41 per cent; in the South Central, from 9 to 12, an increase of 3, or 33.33 per cent; in the North Central, from 20 to 33, an increase of 13, or 65 per cent; and in the Western, from 43 to 53, an increase of 10, or 23 per cent. These figures show that, comparatively, the largest increase of books to population has been in the great Northwest, over 11 per cent each year. In the whole country there has been an average increase of 7.8 per cent per annum; that is, the increase of the number of books in the libraries of the country has been 7.8 per cent greater than the increase of the population during the past six years.

STATISTICS OF LIBRARIES IN THE DOMINION OF CANADA.*

A detailed list of the libraries in the Dominion of Canada is given at the close of the list of those in the United States, but the statistics are not quite so full or arranged upon exactly the same plan as the list of the United States. They include only libraries of 1,000 or more, and such details are found as could well be collected in the limited time given for the work.

The following (Table VI) is a summary of the statistics of the libraries of Canada by provinces, as far as they have been reported, and including the year 1891.

TABLE VI.—Summary of statistics of public libraries in the Dominion of Canada, 1891.

	Number of libraries.	Number of bound volumes at end of year 1891.	Number of pamphlets at end of year 1891.	Total number of volumes and pamphlets.	Number of volumes added in 1891.	Number of pamphlets added in 1891.	Number of volumes purchased in 1890-91.

Quebec.....	27	459,781	31,073	490,354	12,648	5,692

From this table it appears that the total number of public libraries in Canada of all kinds containing 1,000 or more volumes is 202, and of this number the Province of Ontario alone has 152, or over three-fourths of all, while Quebec has 27 or over one-half of the remaining fourth, the other provinces having from 2 to 6 libraries each.

The total number of volumes and pamphlets in all the libraries reported is 1,478,910, of which the Province of Ontario has 863,332 volumes, or almost 60 per cent, while the Province of Quebec has 490,354, or over 33 per cent; Nova Scotia, 48,250 volumes, or $3\frac{1}{4}$ per cent; New Brunswick, 34,894 volumes, a little over $2\frac{3}{10}$ per cent; Manitoba, 31,025 volumes, or $2\frac{1}{10}$ per cent; British Columbia, 10,225 volumes, or not quite $\frac{7}{10}$ of 1 per cent; and Prince Edward Island, 5,200 volumes, or over $\frac{3}{10}$ of 1 per cent of the total number.

Classification.—As to the classification of these libraries, the following (Table VII) gives the summary by provinces:

* The list of libraries in Canada (pp. 206-213) was prepared by Mr. James Bain, jr., chief librarian of the Toronto Public Library.

TABLE VII.—Showing kind or classification of the libraries.

Of the 202 libraries, 195 make report as to the class to which they belong, and of these, 109, over one-half, belong to mechanics' institutes; and of this one class, 108, all except 1 are found in the province of Ontario. The next in number are the college libraries, 29, with 4 university, 19 law, 8 parliamentary, and 14 public libraries. As Ontario and Quebec have nearly nine-tenths of the libraries, but few of the classes are found in the other provinces.

Support of libraries.—The following (Table VIII) shows how the libraries are supported:

TABLE VIII.—Showing how the libraries are supported.
